

CALL FOR PAPERS
to the interdisciplinary issue of BEYOND PHILOLOGY
Communication and Identity in the Times of Crisis

Edited by Dr Karolina Janczukowicz and Dr Beata Karpińska-Musiał
Institute of English and American Studies, Faculty of Languages, University of Gdańsk

Although methodological and epistemological cross-disciplinarity in the humanities and social sciences seems to be a sine qua non condition of any research, its application depends highly on the social, political and cultural climax of a particular time. Constructing and reinterpreting those liminal areas between research disciplines is a dynamic and always contextualized, cultural process which needs a new language of scientific discourse.

That is why one of the next issues of this year's Beyond Philology calls for searching the meeting places between literary studies or linguistics and other scientific disciplines, such as philosophy, pedagogy, sociology, psychology, anthropology, history or those related to art, culture or communication. We are particularly, but not exclusively, interested in the new developments in studies on communicative consciousness, in redefinition of discursive identity and construction of new 'languages of research', especially with reference to post-anthropocentric cultural turn and post-structuralist methodological approaches. As a theoretical frame we propose, as one of possible options, Jurgen Habermas's Theory of Communicative Action and the category of Communicative Rationality, as well as a Narrative Theory (McIntyre 1981, Fisher 1984). It is our hope that despite the geo-political situation and multidimensional crisis experienced these days in Europe, we may invite linguists, pedagogues, sociologists, psychologists, culturalists or anthropologists to share their new perspectives and new recognition of the aforementioned categories. We accept both theoretical articles and papers based on empirical research.

Please send your submissions of approximately 3500 words, accompanied by an abstract of 150 words and a list of 5 keywords, to:

beata.karpinska-musial@ug.edu.pl or to karolina.janczukowicz@ug.edu.pl

We kindly ask you to include the information about the disciplines you are representing/addressing in your abstract.

The deadline for the submissions is 31st of May, 2022.

Beyond Philology is an international journal of linguistics, literary studies and language acquisition. We publish articles, reviews, reports and interviews. The language of the journal is English. Beyond Philology has been listed by the Polish Ministry of Science and Higher Education (40 points)

https://fil.ug.edu.pl/englishstudies/czasopismo_naukowe_beyond_philology and is indexed by

- The Central European Journal of Social Sciences and Humanities \(CEJSH\)
- Index Copernicus
- MLA Bibliography
- ERIH PLUS
- NORWEGIAN REGISTER FOR SCIENTIFIC JOURNALS, SERIES AND PUBLISHERS

Instructions for authors:

https://fil.ug.edu.pl/sites/default/files/_nodes/strona-filologiczny/33797/files/style_sheet.pdf

We hope to hear from you!

